

Will Provide Detention Room For Juveniles With Emergency Hospital

A detention room for juvenile delinquents this morning became a real prospect. This was in connection with the plans to provide a receiving station for the emergency hospital scheme.

As the rooms in the Irwin building on Nuuanu street could not be obtained for more than one year's lease at a time, the health committee of the board of supervisors yesterday called Sheriff Rose into consultation, with a view to finding quarters for the purpose mentioned might not be constructed within the police station.

This morning Building Inspector Freitas and Supervisor Logan waited on the sheriff at the station, where they were joined by Dr. Ayer, emergency hospital physician. As a result of the conference it was decided to propose to the board of supervisors that rooms for the use of the physician be constructed beneath the new office for the district court clerk, for which the board has voted an appropriation of $850.

There will be an office for the physician, with an entrance from the police receiving station, and a room in the rear for the treatment of patients. The latter will be fitted with sanitary equipment, including a sink, and have a space screened off for two or three cots. Entrance to the operating apartment will be from the present runway down to the cells, besides a private door from the doctor's office. The floor of the structure will be two or three steps above the level of the police receiving station floor, so as to clear the tops of the arched entrances to the cells.

Sheriff Rose brought up the need of an inquest room, the holding of inquests in his office being inconvenient. He proposed that the emergency station structure be extended to the rear line of the station house, by the addition of an inquest room. This, he suggested, could be utilized for the detention of juvenile offenders while their cases awaited disposition.

He had consulted with Governor Pinkham upon the question of providing a detention house for juveniles, but the governor said that funds were not available for the purpose. Therefore he thought that a good makeshift for the present might be found in the proposed additions to the station. With an entrance from the main floor to the room the detained boys would not be brought into contact with their seniors in wrong-doing.

Light Sidelights on Police Court Scenes

Eleven persons charged with conducting "blind pigs"—that is, selling liquor without a license, were arrested at Kahuku by Liquor License Inspector Fennell yesterday afternoon and arraigned before District Magistrate Nainoa. Two other suspects escaped arrest, one by departing for Korea and the other by suddenly dying. The 11 "blind-piggers" pleaded guilty, thus causing little work for Attorney Chillingworth, who went to Kahuku to prosecute. A suspended sentence was in order in each case. The license inspector was assisted in rounding up the offenders by Manager Adams of the Kahuku plantation.

License Inspector Fennell was chuckling over what he considers a huge joke on the wholesale liquor dealers of the town, down at the police station today.

"We knew there were 27 'blind pigs' at Kahuku," he remarked. "And so we singled out 11 of these and arrested them. The only evidence we could get was that these men were buying three and four barrels of beer and other liquors every month, and that all they got in wages was about $1 a day. It has been a custom, so we believe, for the wholesalers, as a means of protecting themselves, to send a lawyer to defendants in blind pig cases and to make it as hard as possible for us to secure convictions. Consequently when we make the arrests at Kahuku we said nothing about it in Honolulu and Deputy City and County Attorney Chillingworth and myself went down yesterday and got these 'attorney-less' defendants to plead guilty before the wholesalers found out about their arrest. Of course, the whole thing was a big bluff on our part, but we got away with it."

If a corpse were to walk into the police station it would be somewhat surprising, or if Charles G. Bartlett were to walk into the city attorney's office to discuss the time of day it would be none the less thrilling. However, it was not quite that bad when Roger Chuntell of the 143rd C. A. C., Schofield Barracks, walked into the police station this morning.

Roger, so it appears, was the victim of a collision between his motorcycle and an automobile said to have been driven by H. Henry last Sunday and reports which came to town were to the effect that the motorcyclist broke his leg and arm. Roger walked into the station today nonchalantly swinging his arms around like an athlete. The only thing wrong with him now is a bruised eye.

William the Moose of the Hotel at war college sat down on the curbstone at Arch and Nuuanu streets last night and ruminated on the threatened loss of Warsaw by the Russians. "He'll tell you what, them Roosies w'll never be cotted by the Germans," he declared to himself. William's thoughts on war were interrupted by the appearance of "General" Barboza and he was taken to Joe Fern's municipal lodging house, where the hardships of booze fighting are not so strenuous.

FEDERAL SYSTEM TO LINK PACIFIC WITH WIRELESS

Plans Reported on Foot for Erection of High-Power Station at Sydney

All island groups of the Pacific and Pacific continents, including Australia, will be connected with the mainland of the United States by relay at Honolulu. According to information from the mainland the Federal Telegraph Company is to erect a high power station at Sydney, Australia, to connect with the United States via Honolulu. Thus Honolulu not only will be the "Crossroads of the Pacific" in marine trade routes, but will be the crossing point for many radio stations. Tuesday night the Marconi system inaugurated the around-the-world chain when Honolulu and the new station at Japan got into communication. Within the past few months the Mutual Wireless Company of Honolulu has been developing communication with Tahiti and Samoa.

The navy department plans high power stations at Guam, Manila, Samoa and Pearl Harbor to connect with North Head station, Washington; Mare Island, Point Loma and Panama on the mainland via Pearl Harbor.

Australia thus would be the only continent on the Pacific not in direct wireless communication with Honolulu and the United States via Honolulu, and the information from the coast is to the effect that officials of the Federal company are coming on one of the Sydney-bound steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company in the near future to look further into the Australia proposition.

Recently Poulsen apparatus was installed in the three Oceanic steamers, the Ventura, Sonoma and Sierra, and to get messages to Australia at present these steamers must pay tolls over other wirelesses. It is reported that the Oceanic company has urged the Federal Telegraph to install a plant at Sydney. "The information from the coast may be correct," said Manager W. Young Nolley of the local Federal office, "but as yet I have not been informed as to the company's plans, so far as an Australian station is concerned."

CLARK ARRIVES TO MAKE STUDY OF LABOR HERE

Outside the harbor this afternoon on board the Pacific Mail steamer China is Dr. Victor S. Clark, former territorial commissioner of immigration, but now acting for the United States department of labor, prepared to inquire into labor conditions in the islands in accordance with an act of Congress, according to reports received in Honolulu several weeks ago.

The selection of Dr. Clark is held generally to be a wise one, as his familiarity with labor conditions in the islands already is known, much of his knowledge having been acquired while acting as the immigration commissioner for the territory. Since leaving here he has occupied a chair in the research department of the Carnegie Institution.

Dr. Clark already has made two such reports on the islands for the department of labor, in fact it was on one of these trips that he was offered and accepted the position as territorial immigration commissioner. In 1912 he toured part of the Orient for the department of immigration to look into labor conditions. Doctor Clark may be accompanied by a committee to aid him in his work.
